BADGES OF MATRIMONY.

Worn by All Other Nations, But Ta-

booed by American Women. Americans are the only women in the world who do not exhibit some righ of matrimony, rays a writter in the Buffalo Express. Of course, those who follow in the wake of European etiquette would not appear with their daughters wearing a hat without strings, but the universal American woman buys what she likes, regardless of whether it be matronly or not, and her daughters will relect articles of dress only suitable to married women.

In no other country is this the case Among the Germans the badge of a married woman consists of a little cap or hood, of which they are very proud, and "donning the cap" is a feature of the wedding day among the peasants of certain localities.

The married women of Little Russia are always seen, even in the hottest weather, with a thick cloth of dark his twisted about their heads. In New Guinea a young woman ers her hair hang about her shoulders, but when she is married this is cut short. Chi-nese matrons braid their hair like a helmet. In Wadai the wives color their lips by latooing them with the borns of the neacia and rubbing them with iron fillings. In parts of Africa the married women perrate the outer edges of their ars and lips . and stick rows of grass stalks to them, and among a certain Mongolian tribe of people, the Manthes, the women wear suspended rom their ears a little basket full of cotton. o which a spindle is attached.-Chicago

NATURE AS IT IS TAUGHT.

The Difference Between a Real Robin

and a Schoolroom Drawing. A young lady rehead teacher in one of the west side schools relates a personal experience, which shows the after instillity of many of the systems of teaching. The oung lady rays that one of the studies recently introduced is that of a nature and of natural objects. In order to give the populs correct ideas upon these matters, sincil plates of the leaves of different kinds of trees, of flowers, to show their shape and colors, and of various species of tards are used. One favorite stencil with this young teacher's popils was that of a robin redbreast. She rather liked it herself, and as the bright red called for by the pattern was very attractive to the chiliren, it was more often used than any other. No suspicion entered the minds of either eacher or scholars that they could not instantly tell a real robin redbreast where-ever they might see one During the vacation this summer the young teacher went into the country to visit some friends. In the family there are some children, and, of course, a romp in the woods was the entertainment that most delighted the schoolma'am. There were some revelations for her, too. Many rere some revelations for her, too. Many time had she drawn on the board for ar pupils the cak, maple, and elm leaf, sit she found it impossible to tell one rom the other, though her young communities other, though her young communities of the city are not unlocated as required and who do not attend any work at first. They are determined to have active fire communities of none at all. her pupils the oak, maple, and elm leaf. but she found it impossible to tell one from the other, though her joing companions knew them all at a glatice. One day a little eight-year-old exclaimed. "Oh, pretty little bird that had settled near by on a bartowire fence. "Why, that is not a robin redbreast, Willie," said the teacher. ""Tis, too, a robin redbreast," replied Willie, ""Spose I don't know?"

The other children all corroborated Wiloning schooling am in some curiosity.
"Why, don't you know a robin redbroast when you see it?" they asked.
"Not if that is one." was the subdued reply. "The way I drew them at school for my scholars they are nearly as large as your mother's hen."

MARRIAGES OF THE WORLD.

From 1865 to 1869 Massachusetts and Rhode Island shared with Hungary the ionor of having more marriages per 1.000 inhabitants than any other country in the world. Massachusetts had 10.53 and Rhode Island 11.27 per 1,000. The English average for the same period was 8.36.

Little more than two thirds of the men who marry do so between the ages of twenty and thirty. In France only a quarter of the men marry between twenty and twenty-five. Russia tastheastonishing proportion of 32.01 of men who marry before they are twenty.

In Russia more than half the women who marry do so before they are twenty. With us only about 16 per cent, of the women who marry are less than twenty. The five inch ribbons worn at present are to be followed by others seven inches births per 1,000 inhabitants, which for 1865-'69 in England was 35.3, had declined by 1887-'91 to 31.3, while for France the figures are 25.9 for the former period and 23 for the latter. Even in Germany, where for the whole Empire the births were 39.2 per 1,000 for 1876 '80, they had failen to

The process is by no means uniform, however. The Hungarians grow more prolific, their birth rate baying advanced from 40 7 per 1,000 in 1865-'69 to 42.8 in 1887-'91. Italy shows no decline, nor does Ausiria, Denmark or Spain.
